It is essential that you attend all three days of this course, as each day builds on the last. As we often have people on waiting lists, please consider your colleagues and don't take a place unless you can attend all three days.

This supervision training course will benefit anyone who wants to start supervising and current supervisors who want to know more about models and frameworks for supervision. The course is practical, practice-based, interactive and fun, and covers:

- The tasks, purpose and components of good quality supervision
- A variety of models of supervision
- How to establish and maintain a trusting, productive supervisory relationship
- The value of the negotiated agreement or contract.
- The core supervisory skills – the Supervisor's "Toolbox"
- How to promote reflective practice with supervisees.
- How to effectively review and evaluate the supervision relationship.
- The Supervisor's Role in enhancing Ethical Practice

This course has run for many years in New Zealand and Australia, and is popular with social workers, nurses, OTs, physiotherapists, managers, chaplains, & others who are responsible for providing professional supervision.

Margaret (BA Hons, Dip.Soc.Wk) has a wide range of experience in statutory, NGO and hospital social work. She has more than 30 years experience as a supervisor & trainer. She runs a variety of workshops for both supervisors & supervisees, and is regularly contracted to provide supervision training in physical and mental health environments, government departments and NGOs in Australia and New Zealand. Margaret has presented papers at conferences in New Zealand & Australia, & has published articles on a variety of aspects of supervision.

Margaret's workshops receive consistently positive evaluations for both the material presented and for her training style. Examples of evaluations of Margaret's supervisor training courses:-

- " Margaret held my attention for the whole three days"
- " This is honestly the best course I have ever been on"
- " Margaret's passion for supervision is inspiring"
- " Now I feel equipped and confident to start supervising"
