AASW Hunter Branch: Established 1979

The AASW Hunter Branch was established in May 1979 by a local group of social workers determined to establish an autonomous branch and a school of social work in the Hunter region.

The Hunter Branch is one of the smaller AASW Branches with around 115 members. But, we retain a proud independence, and a "can do" Novocastrian attitude.

The Branch Management Committee of the AASW Hunter Branch invites all former Branch Committee members, and members past and present, to a dinner to celebrate the 30th Anniversary of the establishment of the Hunter Branch.

If you know the whereabouts of any of our former Committee members or Branch members, please let them know about our celebration dinner.

Also, if you have any photos of Hunter Branch meetings, conferences, CPE events, social events, or other activities, please drop us an email.

The Grace Parbery Award for outstanding achievement in Social Work

In 1994, the Hunter Branch introduced the Grace Parbery Award for outstanding achievement in social work practice. Grace Parbery was a pioneer social worker, one of the very first social workers in Newcastle. The Award criteria are simple: it is awarded to a financial or life member of the Hunter Branch who has made an outstanding contribution to the profession in the Hunter, Australia, or overseas — as judged by their peers and the Branch Management Committee. The contribution may be in clinical practice, community development, research, education, or another field of practice. We would like to present the Award at our 30th Anniversary Dinner. If you would like to nominate a member for the Award please contact one of the Branch Management Committee members.

The Grace Parbery Award includes a medallion and a gift of five hundred dollars. Nominations are open.

New AASW Website Launched

The new AASW website was launched on 10 June 2009. You can now join the AASW, renew your membership, and update your membership details, all on-line. Also, Hunter Branch has a new web page.
