AUSTRALIAN ASSOCIATION OF SOCIAL WORKERS

ABORIGINAL & TORRES STRAIT ISLANDER SOCIAL WORKER OF THE YEAR AWARD 2022 CRITERIA

This Award will acknowledge an Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander Social Worker who exemplifies the best of the profession's values, achievements and accomplishments through demonstrated practice. To be eligible, accomplishments must have taken place during the period 01 July 2021 to 30 June 2022.

Who can be nominated?

Social workers engaged directly with the delivery of services to clients within indigenous communities or settings.

Nominees must be a current financial member of the AASW.

Who can nominate a nominee?

Self-nomination and Third-Party nominations will be considered. In the case of Third-Party nominations, we recommend engaging the nominee directly in the process.

Terms and Conditions

Nominations will be made through a "call for nominations" announced by the AASW in September 2022.

Nominations submitted to the AASW Award Committee for consideration must not exceed 2,000 words and be supported by appropriate evidence such as letters of commendation, acknowledgement of achievements through employers or other agencies, newspaper articles or such other relevant evidence.

Nominations must be submitted through the AASW's designated submission process.

The Award Committee will consider all nominations based on written responses to the criteria outlined below.

The Award Committee reserves the right to reject nominations that do not address the criteria or exceed the specified word limits or are not received by the submission deadline.

The written submission in this category will contribute to 100% of the overall score for consideration of this Award and will determine shortlisted Nominees.

Criteria
