meeting as the Australian Health Workforce Ministerial Council

Communique

7 August 2015

The Independent Review of the National Registration and Accreditation Scheme for Health Professions

Australian Health Ministers met in Darwin today as the Australian Health Workforce Ministerial Council. Health Ministers considered the Final Report on the Independent Review of the National Registration and Accreditation Scheme for health professions (the NRAS Review) and are pleased to publicly release the Final Report.

Health Ministers note that the establishment of the National Registration and Accreditation Scheme for health professions (the National Scheme) was a unique and important endeavour that involved enactment of near identical legislation by each State and Territory Parliament, thereby replacing the separate jurisdictional registration of health practitioners in 14 health professions with a single National Scheme.

Health Ministers accept that the National Scheme has been embedded within the Australian health system in a relatively short time. Health Ministers agree with the assessment by the Independent Reviewer that while some changes are needed to improve the National Scheme, it remains acknowledged as amongst the most significant and effective reforms of health profession regulation in Australia and internationally.

Ministers acknowledge the significant achievements highlighted by the NRAS Review:

- a. Ensuring that the community can have confidence that health professionals providing treatment and care in Australia meet a national standard based on safe practice.
- b. Consolidating 74 Acts of Parliament and 97 separate health profession boards into a single national legislation that covers the structure and functions for the regulation of 14 health professions comprising of over 619,500 health professionals.
- c. Increasing the mobility for health professionals working in Australia by removing the necessity for them to be separately registered in each jurisdiction.
- d. Improving protection to the health system by ensuring that any health practitioner who has been found to have committed misconduct can no longer practise undetected in other states or territories.
- e. Enabling significant improvements to health workforce information and planning due to the availability of accurate data on each of the 14 professions operating within it.

The NRAS Review was conducted by Mr Kim Snowball, a former senior public servant and the former Director General of WA Health. The NRAS Review comprised an extensive consultation process which included over 230 written submissions and the involvement of more than 1000 individuals in consultation forums held in each capital city. This level of consultation has allowed the consumers, practitioners, health and education providers, professional associations, National Boards and other stakeholders to raise their concerns directly with the Independent Reviewer. Health Ministers acknowledge the work of Mr Snowball and the project team in ensuring a comprehensive review process.

Health Ministers considered the recommendations arising from the NRAS Review noting that the majority of amendments are designed to enable the National Scheme to fulfil the objectives as set out by Health Ministers at the time of its establishment. The response of Health Ministers to the recommendations (set out in detail in Attachment 1) have been categorised as:

1. Improving Consumer Responsiveness
2. Consolidation of National Boards
3. Accreditation Functions
4. Governance Arrangements
5. Entry into the National Scheme

Improving Consumer Responsiveness

Health Ministers have agreed to the immediate implementation of key recommendations to improve complaints and notification systems, and strengthen community participation in National Board governance to ensure that the National Scheme is responsive to consumers. Health Ministers note that the ability of the National Scheme to fulfil its objectives is compromised without an effective process to manage complaints and notifications. Health Ministers request the Australian Health Practitioner Regulation Agency (AHPRA) to provide a progress report by December 2015.

Consolidation of National Boards

Health Ministers have deferred all decisions relating to the consolidation of the nine low regulatory National Boards and have asked the Australian Health Ministers' Advisory Council (AHMAC) to provide additional advice. AHMAC has invited National Boards, AHPRA and Professional Associations as part of a targeted consultation to propose alternative approaches to ensure the sustainability of the National Scheme and enable a streamlined approach to governance functions which also encourages cross pollination of ideas and best practice approaches across National Boards.

Accreditation Functions

Health Ministers are concerned about the significant issues relating to the high cost, lack of scrutiny, duplication and the prescriptive approach to accreditation functions highlighted in the Final Report. While the recommendations will go some way to improve Australia's accreditation arrangements, Health Ministers believe that more substantive reform of accreditation functions is required to address the issues raised. Health Ministers have asked AHMAC to commission further advice and undertake a comprehensive review of accreditation functions. The terms of reference for this review will include comparative analysis of the Australian and United Kingdom systems as well as further consideration of the 2005 Productivity Commission Australia's Health Workforce report findings to specifically address the concerns related to cost, governance and duplication highlighted during the NRAS Review. This review is to be undertaken within 12 months and advice provided to Health Ministers by December 2016.

Governance Arrangements

Health Ministers do not support the establishment of a Professional Standards Advisory Council. Health Ministers accept that improvements to governance, reporting and reform arrangements are necessary to improve the transparency and accountability of the National Scheme. However, these improvements will be achieved through existing structures including the Agency Management Committee (which provides governance and oversight to the operations of AHPRA) and AHMAC.

Entry into the National Scheme

Health Ministers note that the NRAS Review has identified a lack of clarity with regard to the purpose and scope of the National Scheme and have agreed to issue a communique to clarify the intent of the National Scheme and propose a process for unregistered professions to raise concerns regarding government policy, funding and programs where absence of registration is the sole factor for exclusion.

Of the 33 recommendations proposed, Health Ministers accept 9 recommendations¹, accept in principle 11 recommendations², do not accept 6 recommendations³, and defer decisions on 7 recommendations⁴ pending further advice.
