AASW social workers make a difference they are qualified, accountable to a code of ethics and committed to professional development. Most of all, they value client safety and advocate on their behalf for a sustainable and socially-just Australia.

How will you celebrate World Social Work Day 2017?

This year we are encouraging as many localised celebration gatherings as possible. Can you organise your team to mark the day with a morning tea or draft a statement of support for your agencies' newsletter?

Join in celebrating pride of our profession on WSWD Tuesday, 21 March:

1. Organise a way to mark WSWD with your network
2. Let the Branch office know your plan - we'll list the event on our WSWD web pages
3. Take a photo and add it to our AASW SA FaceBook page to help highlight the contribution of our profession to our communities.

"Promoting Community and Environmental Sustainability"

Guest Speaker

Cathy Taylor, Chief Executive, Department for Child Protection will speak on her vision for connecting all SA services for families and children at risk, and what role social workers can particularly play in that.

"I look forward to working with staff, the non-government sector and the South Australian community in implementing the reforms to the child protection system."

Adelaideans - come and join us for our breakfast at the Adelaide Pavilion and hear how having a strong social work profession in South Australia is more important than ever in 2017.

As social workers, we are working every day with life at its extremes, witnessing the highs and lows of human capabilities and behaviour. Our experience and research tells us that with the right support people, systems and the way we exist together can change for the better. This conviction is the driving force behind our efforts as your professional association.
