A full day workshop with Dr Amanda Nickson
Making the most of Supervision in a remote setting

AASW (NT) is delighted to announce that Dr Amanda Nickson, Interactive Solutions will be offering social workers and community/health professionals in Central Australia this valuable development opportunity. The workshop is based on best practice research and will guide participants through supervision effectively applied in a remote setting (as per AASW Supervision Standards and AASW Code of Ethics).

In this training, Amanda will explore how supervision is an ongoing requirement for all social workers throughout their careers. The presentation will arm participants with tools and knowledge about factors that help or hinder supervision and explore how performance management fits with supervision.

Learning Outcomes

At the completion of the workshop participants will have:

- a genuine understanding of supervision; structured and unstructured, external and internal
- a sound knowledge of what makes supervision work well
- an understanding of the core functions of supervision
- knowledge of alternative models, including peer supervision and group supervision
- skills to build on existing strengths when having difficult conversations and
- expertise in managing tensions which are grounded in social work values and ethics.
