Speaker: Fiona Bosly, Social Worker

‘I wouldn’t want my kids around him’: How men who use violence in their intimate relationships perceive themselves as fathers

The subject of domestically violent fathers raises issues related to the care and wellbeing of their children. This research is an attempt to understand how domestically violent fathers understand and see themselves in their fathering role. The study confirmed existing studies on domestically violent fathers, it also extends our knowledge on domestically violent fathers’ attitudes on power, gender, entitlement and self.
